1. The Creative Suite is a collection of paid software offered by Adobe that is packaged together. For less than $1,000, you can purchase Adobe Photoshop, Adobe InDesign, Adobe Illustrator, Adobe Acrobat, Adobe Premiere Pro, Adobe XD, Adobe Analytics, Adobe XD Designer, and Acrobat Reader with one installment. 2. A premultiplied alpha is used by those in the graphics industry to provide semi-transparency in a layer. 3. Transparency controls include the box option, the white fill, and the colored line. 4. The opacity of a layer is the amount it is visible on a document, ranging from 0% to 100%. 5. The filter controls allow you to apply special effects to an image. 6. The Layers panel displays layers with the rectangle icons. 7. The layer mask controls allow you to create a temporary mask over another layer that allows you to paint over it. 8. This filter is for creating pictures with all the settings set to the same, but then having the filters applied to an image one at a time. 9. Effects are a series of settings applied to an image that effects the brightness, contrast, and saturation of the image. 10. The Composite controls apply multiple layers on top of an image. Figure 1.4 Layers panel with an alpha layer Figure 1.5 Transparent checkerboard Figure 1.6 Layer Mask Figure 1.7 Layer Mask options

The spread of COVID-19 has been touching a number of sectors, but has so far had little impact on the financial services industry. That's not surprising since the financial sector is so tightly regulated and the public is rightly wary of any disruption to the allocation of capital. But if you're thinking about setting up an online business or you're already running one, now might be a good time to consider the impact of COVID-19 on your customer base. Long history of contactless payments Make no mistake – contactless payments are here to stay. The industry is not going back to the “good old days” of 50p coins for phone top up purchases, and cash is dead as a method of payment. The good news is that the number of contactless card users in the UK is now over 13 million, according to data from analyst firm Ovum. About half of these are “young, affluent millennials,” but contactless cards are also popular among the elderly and other demographic groups. What you do need to worry about is the virus. A lot of people will have no experience of the technology and its uses, so it's essential to be open and transparent about what's involved. It is also vital to help users get to grips with the technology and show them how to make the most of it. How does this look? Here are just a few ways in which your customers' experiences with contactless technology could be affected by the virus. Is my current card affected? The first step in any crisis is to check on whether you have the resources you need on hand to deal with it. Contactless cards are a rarity in developing markets, so it's unlikely you'll have much experience of them. The UK is an exception, however, so you probably have a good idea of how the technology works. But what if your card issuer or retailer doesn't have that level of experience? If you are one of the minority of people with your hands on contactless cards, don't be afraid to quiz them on how you can help your customers. If they're not sure how to do that, there's lots of public information available on the internet. Or you can help them by typing in a few key phrases and pointing them to the relevant websites. If you do

Q: How do I get Android UI elements to be a fixed distance apart? For example, in the default Gmail app on an Android phone, the tab and button bar for composing a new email are on top of the body text field. I don't want this spacing to be fixed, I want it to be the distance between the text box and the parent view, so that when the text box gains focus it gets pushed up by the two bars. I could just make the body text field higher than the tabs and button bar by padding it, but I still get the “justification” problem. The padding pushes the body text up, but then takes up space in the horizontal direction, so it centers vertically. Ideally, I would like the view to be pushed up with padding so that it is centered in the parent view horizontally and vertically. Does anyone know how to do this? A: You can use the gravity property on the layout that contains the text field and the tabs/button bar. eg: `text_field.setGravity(Gravity.LEFT)`; Pharmacology of non-narcotic analgesics in the treatment of pain caused by cancer: An overview. The role of opioids in the treatment of cancer pain remains controversial; however, it has been demonstrated that there is a subset of patients suffering from severe cancer pain that are refractory to opioids, and who require alternative analgesics. Non-opioid analgesics have been extensively investigated for their efficacy, safety and tolerability in the management of cancer pain, although their clinical utility has been questioned and, at best, they have served only a modest role in the opioid-based therapy of pain. Nevertheless, non-opioid drugs, particularly non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) and cyclooxygenase (COX)-2 inhibitors, continue to be used in palliative cancer care, as their utility is cost-effective. This article reviews the role of non-opioid analgesics in the management of cancer pain. The main focus of this review is to examine the evidence supporting their use in the management of cancer pain, and the basis for possible future clinical use.
