[The effect of salt stress on the cadmium accumulation and lead immobilization in leaves of Sedum alfredii]. To explore the cadmium (Cd) accumulation and lead (Pb) immobilization in the leaves of Sedum alfredii under Cd stress, and the roles of exogenous NaCl in improving the effect of salinity in phytoremediation of Cd and Pb in sediments. A field-experiment was carried out in Cd-polluted sediments (salt pond sediment) with a NaCl gradient of 0, 50, 150, 300 mmol x L(-1) in a randomized complete block design with a plot size of 40 m2. The plants were irrigated with the same amount of water in the test or control plots. The contents of Cd and Pb in the aboveground parts of S. alfredii were determined. The effect of NaCl on the Cd and Pb contents in the leaves were analyzed with two-way ANOVA with block and NaCl concentration as the main effects and their interaction as the second factor. A significant correlation was found between Cd and Pb in the leaves of S. alfredii under control conditions and in the presence of NaCl. The Cd concentration in the leaves significantly increased with increasing NaCl concentrations. The
