Microsoft Protel Altium Dxp 2004 keygen. Altium Protel DXP 2004 SP2 v.Highland Park residents may know the debate over money laundering has a lot to do with money. And it seems that money can and does flow through the park. The financial district of Highlands Park is home to nearly 17,000 residents, but there are some types of businesses that are seeing an influx of money. The city's business owners have asked local police to closely watch their purses for bulging wallets or loose bills. It's money laundering. "We're doing what's called money laundering here," said Highlands Park police Capt. Tom Hamilton. "This is a small city, so we get our fair share of suspicious activity." Residents are increasingly telling Highlands Park police about suspicious behavior in their neighborhood. A block off North Valley Road, the president of a small business says he has been waking up to find his cash almost gone. "I actually call the bank, say, hey, I was robbed. They said, I don't know, it must have been a false alarm," said Glen Ebey, president of Lasaglass Glass. In fact, it wasn't a false alarm. A man broke into the business last October and stole $20,000 in cash. The police report doesn't say how or why the thief hit the business. Since that incident, Ebey says he's no longer sleeping well at night. The police report never shows up at his bank. He's not sure if they keep them at the police station. "Unfortunately, we can't do much," Ebey said. "We do our best to watch it, and that's all we can do." That kind of crime is illegal and carries a penalty of up to five years in prison. Federal and state law enforcement officials are monitoring this case. Ebey said he is just relieved the man didn't take the cash. "All I'm worried about is getting it back, getting it back to my bank account," he said. Hamilton, the police captain, said that he has seen more reports of people trying to sneak in people with big money to enter stores, then trying to sneak it out before police arrive. Last year, two people were caught on surveillance cameras trying to get a flatbed truck loaded with nearly $500,000 into the back door of a business in Highlands Park. It was carrying more than a 0cc13bf012
