Your actions determine whether the Workers 'and peasants' Red Army will be able to hold the important strategic point of Tsaritsyn while fighting against the Belokazaks. - The new addition of the Horde system, which is a feature-rich and complex system based on players' actions in the game. - The addition of the Battle scene of the Stage III and IV Russian Civil War. - New factions, weapons, vehicles and more. - The highlight of this version is the addition of two new weapons to the game: the Tier 5 Rheinmetall MG3 and a laser sight for the PTRS-41. - The available options have been modified to better the performance and usability of the game. A: I think this is a very interesting idea and I applaud you for putting this out on a free platform. It's a decent game, but it lacks the volume of content you want for a full game. So I'd like to offer you some advice on getting the right people to help you with the updates: Don't go with the OP. He seems like a very reasonable and responsive guy. But when it comes to releasing the game with the changes you want to make he just won't be as flexible as a volunteer from the community. Offer him money instead and he'll be more willing to work for you. Join the official forums to talk to volunteers who would be willing to join you for a portion of the work. They will be dedicated to this project and eager to work for you, and you won't have to worry about quality since they will be updating the map for you. Eventually your game will be out in beta form, where you can show off your ideas for what you want in the game. At this point you can get volunteer who are dedicated to the game and who understand your vision. People will be looking forward to playing your game and trying to beat your high score. As the game grows in popularity more people will want to play, but that's not the reason you want volunteers. You want volunteers because they are dedicated to the project, and the better the game is, the more people will be willing to help with bugs, translations, and much more. If you keep the momentum going, the game will be much bigger and better than it is now. I don't want to discourage you from making the game yourself, but finding volunteers to help you would be much
